Japanese

Utsuwa

A Zen-like lunch

Japanese potters believe that fine food possesses the ability to make mere tableware — utsuwa — come alive — a concept called “yo no bi.” Fittingly, the beautiful dishes used at this restaurant, which are crafted at the art studio next door, are plated with inspirational Japanese cuisine that makes your taste buds jump as well. The minimalist menu printed on Japanese handmade washi paper offers two different lunch sets daily (¥50-65) and a small à la carte selection. The high quality, oil-free ingredients and beautiful presentation emphasize health and aesthetics. Try the Wednesday ¥50 set, which comes with mushroom salad (three types of cooked mushrooms warming a bed of lettuce and cucumber), fried chicken, a rice omelette and miso soup. Sit upstairs at a beautiful antique table sunken balcony overlooking a peaceful stone garden, and head next door after dinner for post-prandial pottery. — Mark Andrews
